If you have any positive thoughts about introducing a child to the beautiful and life-long quiet sport of fly fishing, this new book achieves the mission of introducing the sport through wonderful on the water pictures of a young person, called Trout-tail, fly fishing. The pictorial story introduces the beauty of the sport by showing many of the charming attributes of enjoying the beauty of the places where fly fishing is pursued. The written story works well with the photos and talks about the traditional culture of the sport, such as carry out what you carry in, and catch-and-release etc. The story journey then goes on to introduce the equipment utilized, as well as picturing and talking about flies and the new hobby of young Trout-tail actually tying his own flies! It is a wonderful gift for any household with young boys and girls.

Wow! What a book for a young boy or girl that loves the Outdoors, Nature and Fishing. A must read for those parents that partake in Flyfishing and want their little ones to follow in their footsteps. 's reading level of 8 - 12 is not accurate - it should be 6 - Adult! The subtle journey through Trouttail's eyes teaches all of us the love of Nature, Conservation and appreciation of the Outdoor Experiences one can have outside the bustling Cities and Towns most of us live in. We all know that a photo is worth a 1000 words - well, these photos are worth 10,000 words and are beautiful and unique at the same time. The text contains more information than you realize, so you must read Trouttail several times. Even I had a difficult time finding a Fly hidden on each page - see if you can? This book is deemed to become a Classic on Fly Fishing once the word gets out. Every Fly Fisherman young and old should own a copy!Harry N. Marvin III
